She will try to understand the feelings that torment her, since that boy who would change her life arrived... those feelings similar to those of a maiden in love? Or just the obsession of wanting to destroy him to prove that he is just a fake genius? Ever since I came to this school I thought it would be boring, a bland journey before going to the University; But who would've thought that the world is full of surprises, when the first day I saw the name "Ayanokouji Kiyotaka", everything would be different around here. I never thought that the masterpiece of Ayanokouji-sensei would be here, since I was a child when I watched him with my father through a window, I thought that I would never see him right here being free.

You can say that I felt some pity for him. The idea of depriving a child of trivial things like socializing, having friends, playing, and having a structured family sounds very cruel, even worse coming from his own father... I still have that memory when I was witnessing the sea on that day; It was so beautiful to see how watching the sea can make you reflect about life, about our actions, about our existence.

I wanted to touch the sea but with my difficulty walking it was impossible, until my favorite hat flew away, what a fragile body. I thought I would lose it forever but it wasn't. A man gave it back to me along with a bottle of water, and when I tried to see him, I only saw his figure in the distance.

I had the presence or the feeling that it was him, but that was extremely impossible... that he was free since he was probably still in the White Room but the truth is that I wished that person had been him, but it seems that destiny is very cruel with people.

It's a nice memory, now he is in the same school as me, although he is in a lower class than mine, I would like to ask him lots of things but it would only cause a conflict from his class.

Now that I think about it he has changed a lot, he is not the same person as when he first came here, I have been hearing some rumors going around the school that "Kei Karuizawa is in a relationship with Ayanokouji Kiyotaka", or something like "Ayanokouji Kiyotaka is dating Kei Karuizawa."

The truth is, I don't think something like that is going on. Ayanokouji-kun is too much for such a common girl as Kei Karuizawa who is only annoying.

Well, I don't understand much about relationships or even the slightest knowledge, but I know that Ayanokouji-kun is the perfect man for me, if it's with him it would be the opportunity to experience what it feels like to have a relationship with the person you love the most... but it would be complicated but not impossible.

Tomorrow I will go to his class to talk to him. If any of his insignificant classmates interfere in our conversation, I will have to bring some subordinates with me.

Ayanokouji Kiyotaka, I still want to destroy you but it seems that...

"Fufu, my feelings resemble those of a maiden in love who wants to make her love bloom like orchid trees." I glanced at the picture on my hand once again.

"I'll make you mine, Kiyotaka."
